Draw Queen Victoria in six steps

5 POINTS

This is the young Queen Victoria, the way painters showed her just after she was crowned: hair parted in the middle and looped over her ears, a small crown, and a blue sash. Look at the real pictures, then draw lightly in pencil first.

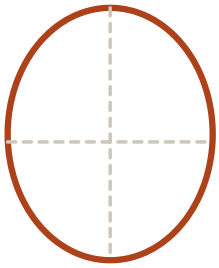

Young Victoria, painted in 1842 · Franz Xaver Winterhalter, 1842, Public domain, via Wikimedia Commons

Old Victoria, photographed in 1882 · Alexander Bassano, 1882, Public domain, via Wikimedia Commons

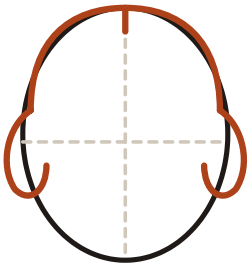

1. An egg for a head

Draw an upside-down egg. Add a faint cross: the eyes go on the middle line.

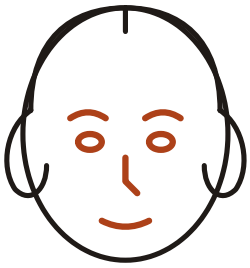

2. Hair with a middle parting

A smooth cap of hair, parted in the middle, with loops that cover her ears.

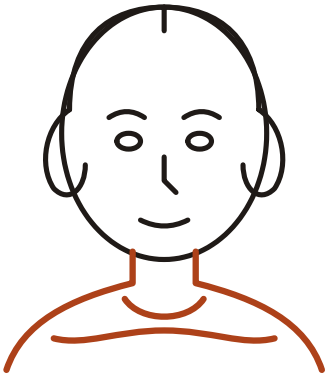

3. A calm face

Two small eyes on the middle line, a little nose, and a small, serious mouth. Queens did not grin for portraits.

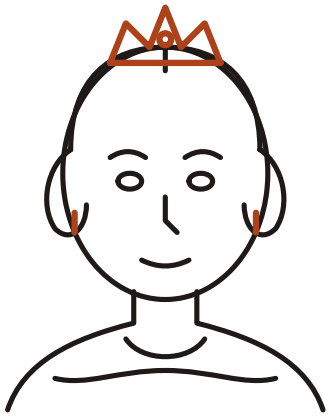

4. Neck and shoulders

A short neck, round shoulders and a wide neckline with lace. Add a necklace.

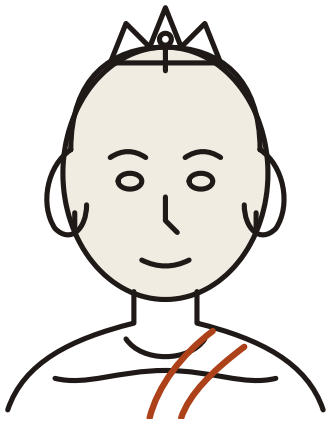

5. A small crown

A little crown sits on top of her hair: a band, points, and a few jewels. Earrings too.

6. Sash and colour

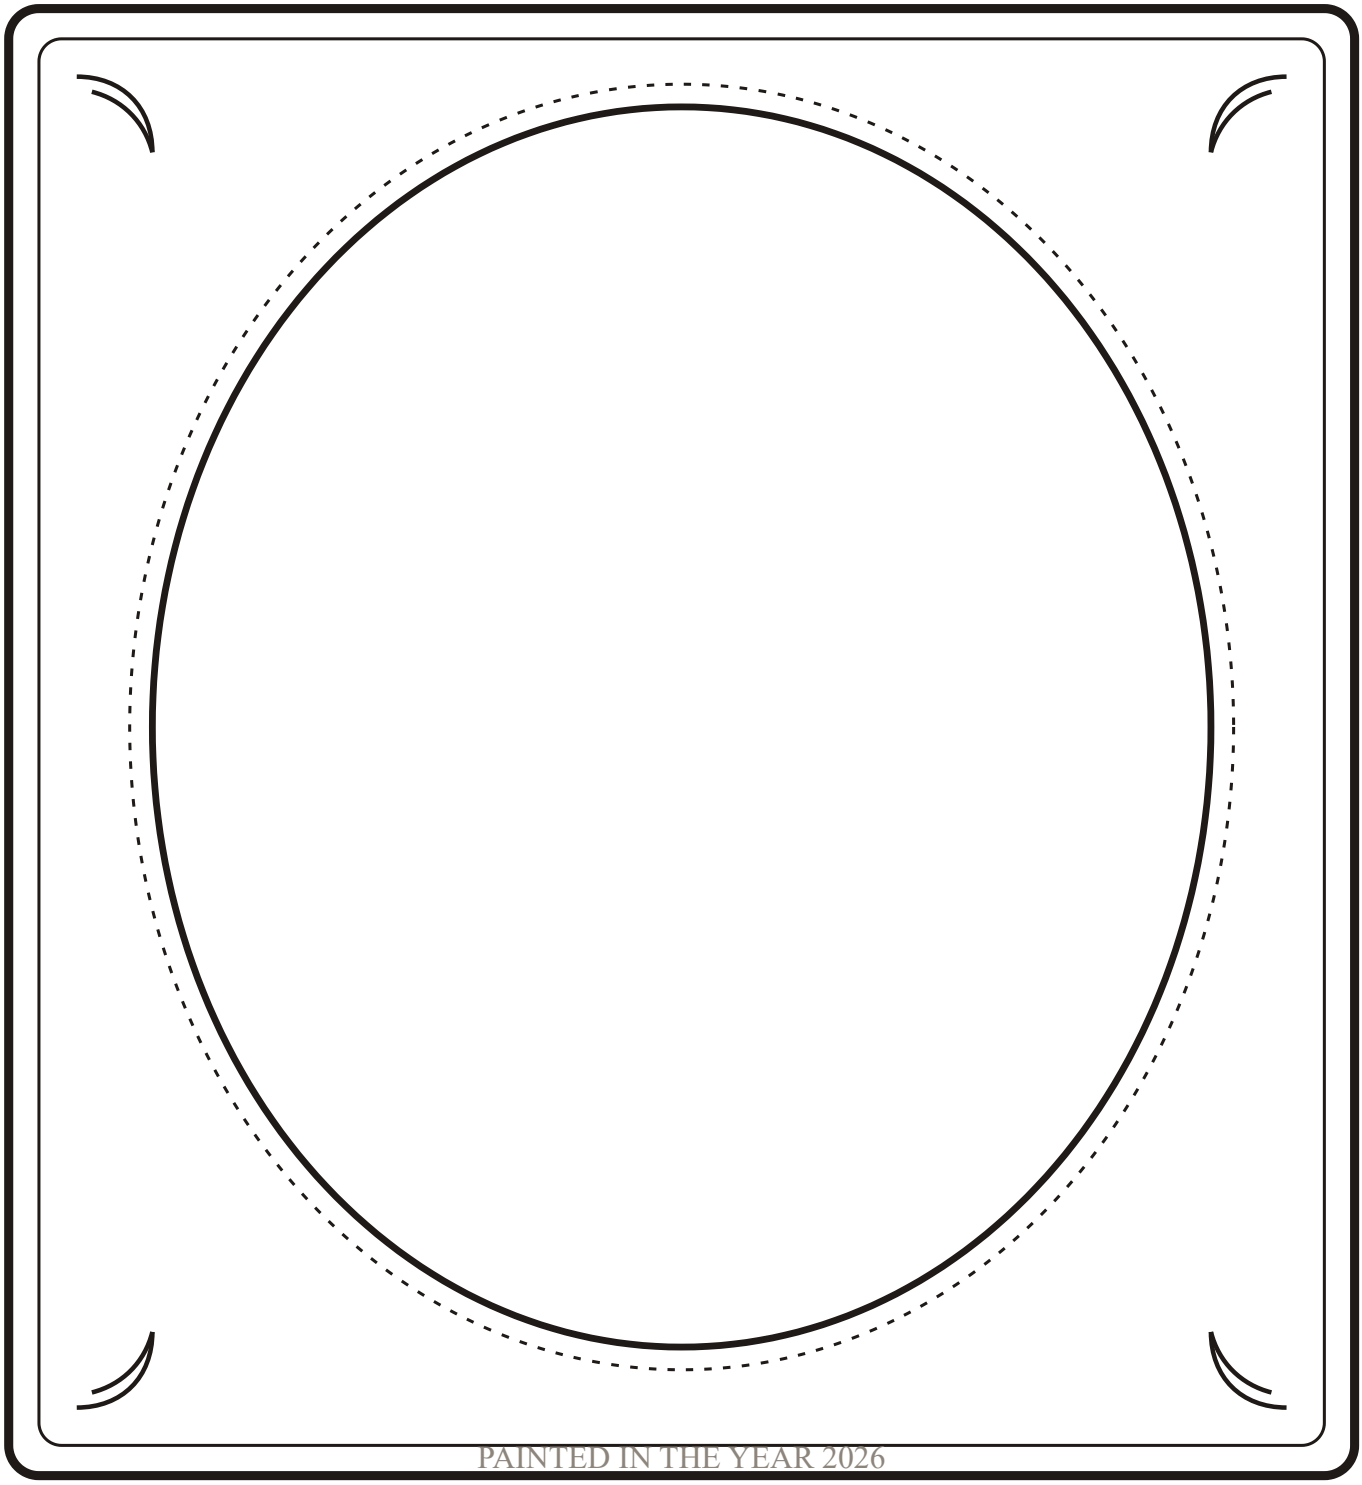

A wide sash from her left shoulder. Colour it blue, the dress white or black, the crown gold, the hair dark brown.

Name _____ Date _____

My portrait of Queen Victoria

5 POINTS

Queen Victoria, by _____

Colours to use

dark brown hair	pale skin, pink cheeks	blue sash	gold crown	white lace and dress	black dress (when she was old)

Name _____ Date _____

Art ideas: any materials you choose

5 POINTS

Young queen, 1837 to 1840s
Dark hair parted in the middle, braided and looped over her ears, a small sparkling tiara set towards the back of her head, a white silk dress with lace, and a serious expression. In some pictures, a blue sash.

Mother, 1846 to 1850s
Hair smoothed back, a rich dress with a wide skirt, a small crown and pearls, often with Albert and the children around her.

Old queen, 1880s to 1901
A black dress, a white veil, a small diamond crown on top of her head, a round face and a very serious look. She is often shown sitting.

Collage queen
Draw her face, then dress her in scraps: fabric for the dress, tin foil for the crown, cotton wool or doily for the lace, a ribbon for the sash.

Silhouette
Victorians loved black paper silhouettes. Draw her side view (nose, chin, hair bun, crown) on black paper, cut it out and stick it on white.

Paint like a portrait painter
Paint the background first, then the dress, then the face last. Mix a tiny bit of red into white for her cheeks.

Penny Black stamp
Design a stamp with her head in profile, like the first ever stamp from 1840. Use the frame on this page.

Two Victorias
Draw her young on one half of the page and old (black dress, white lace cap) on the other half.

Salt-dough medal
Press her face into a flat circle of salt dough with a pencil, bake it, and paint it gold like a coin.

POSTAGE

ONE PENNY

My Penny Black
The Penny Black was the first stamp in the world. It showed the young queen's head from the side. Look at the real one, then draw her profile in the frame: forehead, nose, lips, chin, then the hair bun and a small crown at the back. Colour the background black and leave her face white.

The real Penny Black, 1840 · UK Government, 1840, Public domain (UK Government), via Wikimedia Commons

Name _____ Date _____